

Call for Papers: Mobilities and Settler Colonialism

Natchee Blu Barnd (OSU), Laura Barraclough (Yale), & Genevieve Carpio (UCLA) are accepting abstracts for a special journal issue proposal on the theme of "mobilities and settler colonialism" for Mobilities.

Please submit a working title, a 200-word abstract, and 5 to 7 keywords to settlermobilities@gmail.com by Friday, May 31, 2019. Also please submit a short author biography (100 words max) as well as your full CV. Authors will be notified by June 15 if their abstract has been selected for inclusion in the initial proposal to the journal; deadlines for the submission of full manuscripts will be determined shortly after the special issue is accepted. Full manuscripts will be approximately 8,000-10,000 words, including all tables, references, figure captions, footnotes, and endnotes, and will undergo a full peer-review process. Opportunities may ultimately exist for including digital media content (e.g., a video abstract) with your paper.

The journal issue will be guest-edited by Genevieve Carpio (UCLA), Natchee Blu Barnd (Oregon State University), and Laura Barraclough (Yale University). Questions may be directed to us collectively at this same email address: settlermobilities@gmail.com.
